

COVID RESPONSIVE BEHAVIOUR

Needless to say COVID19 is the hottest topic since quite some time. COVID19 pandemic has led to unprecedented and unanticipated challenges requiring collective action and support from all. We need to be held responsible for our actions in such a pandemic. The following essay takes a look on the topic of the argument.

First and foremost, this virus isn't like any other normal virus. Yes, it does have the characteristics the same as any other virus but it can put your life in danger and make you say 'goodbye' to this world. Many people have already experienced that. And if you don't want to join those people be careful. Secondly, while all necessary measures to fight the spread of COVID-19 are being effectively led by the governments of almost every country, there is a need to reinforce the importance of preventive measures and practices in a sustained manner, to deal with the disease over the long run. On top of that, we should be considerate of our own actions rather than doing something that everyone else is doing because something which is done by majority might not always be right.

Some of the basic preventive measures to follow are wearing mask, washing hands properly, not to have any sort of physical contact with someone, maintain hygiene, maintain physical distance etc. Some of these measures might be new to a lot of people and it's hard to follow them but not impossible. We need to follow these not just for ourselves but for everyone around us.

We don't yet have a cure for this virus but we still need to think with calm and peaceful mind. We should not get depressed because of this 'so-called' virus. Some great scientists have discovered a vaccine for this virus. Many people around the globe have been already vaccinated. The vaccine does have some side effects but encourage as many people as you can to be vaccinated. But always remember that just because you are vaccinated doesn't mean that you don't have to be careful anymore.

I would like to conclude this with that there are many people who still are not careful at all regarding COVID-19. Those people are not only risking their own lives but other's as well. You need to go in quarantine if you were in contact with a COVID positive person even if you are tested as COVID negative. It's hard when you get sick but trust me it's even harder when you have to deal with the sickness all by yourself.
