Q1. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow. (10×1=10)

Trees are the best gift of nature. They make the environment beautiful and clean. No life is possible on Earth without trees as they, in the presence of sunlight, chlorophyll and water, absorb carbon dioxide from the atmosphere and produce oxygen which helps to support all forms of life on earth.

Trees can be called our best friends as they provide resources to fulfil all our direct and indirect needs. They are valuable source of different kinds of commodities like wood, fuel, fodder, timber and herbal medicines. Trees also provide several kinds of raw materials useful for various industries. Trees are a blessing for humans in different ways. They are globally important because they play a significant role in maintaining the ecosystem of the Earth. They protect the soil from erosion by holding it tightly and maintain soil fertility. Soil erosion is the degradation of soil when its upper layer is displaced by wind, water or any other way. They also provide shade and shelter not just to humans but also to different animals and birds.

But today due to increase in population and human needs, deforestation has increased. This may lead to a number of environmental issues as well as our survival on Earth. We must plant more and more trees to ensure our survival on Earth. We should never forget that trees fill our lives with greenery, freshness and nourishment and now it is our turn to pay back to Mother Nature by planting more and more trees.

Did you meet God? This was a question Rakesh Sharma, the first Indian to travel into space, often faced from admirers at home after he returned to Earth in 1984. 'I would say, no, I hadn't met God,' he said. More than three decades later, fact and fiction blur easily with his modern-day fans when they meet Mr Sharma, 68.

'Now many young mothers introduce me to their kids and tell them, "This uncle has been to the Moon." But Mr Sharma can never forget the hysteria after he returned from space. He criss-crossed the country and lived in hotels and guest houses. He posed for pictures and gave speeches. Elderly women blessed him; fans tore his clothes and sought autographs. Politicians paraded him in their constituencies for votes; and authorities sent him on holiday to a national park in searing 45°C (113°F) temperatures.

'It was completely over the top. It left me irritated and tired. I had to keep a smile on my face all the time,' he recounts. Mr Sharma wears his achievements and fame lightly. He joined India's air force at 21 and began flying supersonic jet fighters. He had flown 21 missions in the 1971 war with Pakistan before his 23rd birthday. By 25, he was a test pilot. He travelled into space at 35, the first Indian and the 128th human to do so. 'I had pretty much done it all before I went into space. So when the opportunity came, I went along. It was that simple.'
