One day a wolf was wounded by some hunters and their dogs. Although he had managed to escape, he was tired and in pain. So, he went to a bank of a stream to rest.

Soon the wolf was hungry. After his long run to save his life from the dogs, he felt so tired that he had no energy to move even a step. Suddenly he saw a sheep drinking water from the stream. The wolf said in a sweet voice, "Dear sheep, have pity on me! The hunting dogs have wounded me. I am unable to get up and move, and I am very thirsty, will you please bring me some water?" The sheep was very clever. He realized that the wolf was trying to trap him. He said, "Dear wolf! All animals are similar in nature. After we quench our thirst, we feel hungry. I know what will happen after you quench your thirst. I know that it's one's duty to give water to the thirsty but I do not want to risk my life. So I have to stay away from you." Saying this, the sheep ran away.
